SKILLS LIST

This list is not exhaustive. I was a Utility Helicopter Repairman in the U.S. Army, I've worked at newspapers as a graphic designer, two TV stations producing broadcast videos, 8 years in agency work, I've taught college level courses, on top of trying to stay up on the latest web and software technologies. Learning is a lifelong process!

- I have been shooting, producing and editing videos for broadcast, cable, infomercials, TV commercials and web since 1997
- Media & Production: Adobe Master Collection -- Premiere Pro, After Effects, Animate, Character Animator, Photoshop, InDesign, Illustrator, Audition & Apple Final Cut Pro
- 3D: Blender, Autodesk 3Ds Max, Revit, Character Studio
- Video and audio setups, DSLR HD videography, dollies and camera cranes. Other NLEs, Cubase Artist Pro 11.0
- I have produced logo animations, video effects, 3D modeling and characters, virtual tours and other 3D animations since 2001

Storyboards can only tell some of the story but enough where the viewer should want to see more. They don't show times you had to make a split-second decision because sometimes during live shoots things don't always go as planned. You have to edit in your head, compile the shot list, then go for more -- that "money shot" might present itself! Maybe for the farmer's market you spotted two gentlemen sitting in their rocking chairs and you took the shot despite it was against the sun. Maybe for the Children's Cancer Center you saw a small boy fighting cancer playing with a nurse in the hallway sharing a priceless moment of laughter.

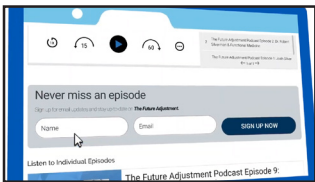

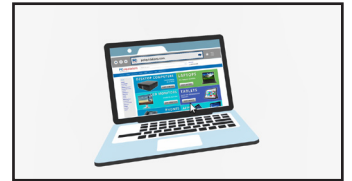

Do the visuals capture the mood and help convey the message?

A storyboard doesn't show the great ideas you left behind because you had to make a quick decision between making the deadline or getting it "just the way you wanted it." In the end, you do your best with the time allotted, you listen to feedback, you learn and continuously improve for the next production!

All animations in After Effects, Animate, and/or Blender!

National TV spot, one of 8 scripts in ad campaigns I wrote for Riddle's Jewelry. This spot I co-shot and made final edits.

PC Liquidations - Videos aired during Jumbo Shrimp baseball games!

Capture the mood with the right tempo and flow. Deliver what's expected and always try to exceed expectations when possible!
